Ford Angles for White House Plea to "Talk it Over"

WASHINGTON — Despite Henry Ford's claim that absence of the Blue Eagle has not hurt his business, it appears that he did not relish his role of recalcitrance.

Through private emissaries recently he has made several secret overtures for an invitation from President Roosevelt to come to the White House and talk things over.

In this way he would save his face amid a fanfare of publicity.

F. D. R., however, has remained cool and aloof. He sent word to the auto magnate that he had nothing to say to him, but if he wanted to call, he would, of course, be glad to see him. But the President is issuing no invitation to Henry Ford. If Ford comes to Washington it will have to be strictly on his own initiative.

Under the Code

There is a great deal of misapprehension about Ford's status as regards the auto code.

Despite his refusal to sign he is as much under its jurisdiction as those manufacturers who did. The code covers the entire automobile industry, signers as well as non-signers. Every plant must abide by its terms and regulations; those who violate them in any particular are subject to prosecution.

The big distinction between signers and non-signers is that only the former may fly the Blue Eagle, thus signifying their public support of the President's recovery program, as well as the government's stamp of approval on their products.

Broken Record

It was by sheer accident that two American Marines were landed on Cuban soil the other day. Although withdrawn immediately, they broke the record of Ambassador Welles in keeping Cuba completely free of American intervention.

Responsibility for the break has been placed upon the commander of the destroyer Fred J. Talbot, lying in Puerto Padre harbor. He told the Marines ashore when the yacht club was reported to be in danger. Apparently it wasn't.

Ambassador Welles was much provoked. Two Marines, in the minds of some Latin Americans, are as good as a regiment.

The Answer

Oklahoma's tall, dapper Senator Elmer Thomas, tireless inflation advocate, has a pet illustration he invariably uncorks when proselytizing for greenbacks. He pulled it out on U. S. Treasurer William A. Julian the other day.

"Mr. Julian," he demanded Thomas, "do you know what the total compound interest would amount to today if Abraham Lincoln had financed the Civil War by 5 percent bonds instead of the $450,000,000 in greenbacks he issued?"

"Yes," replied Julian, "I know the answer to that one. The interest would amount to eleven billion dollars, one half of the present national debt. Now let me show you something."

Whereupon Julian pulled from his billfold a $5 note of the Civil War issue. Thomas offered to buy it at Julian's price, but it was not for sale.

Warning

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board is quietly taking steps to crack down on certain lawyers who seek to exact fees from distressed home owners needing government loans. These petty chiselers are telling loan applicants they must have legal advice in preparing their papers.

This is not so. In fact, the law expressly forbids the taking of fees for negotiating home loans and fixes heavy penalties for violating the statute.

TEN CONVICTS ELUDE ARMED STATE GUARDS

Police Concentrate Efforts in Wooded Areas of Northern Indiana

McNUTT SENDS HELP

Neighborhoods Fear Attacks of Convicts

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Sept. 28.—Two armed forces of national guardsmen and police today were surrounding separate wooded tracts in northern Indiana where at least four of the ten escaped convicts from the Indiana State penitentiary here were believed trapped.

One heavily-armed force had closed in on a woodland near Walkerton, fifteen miles south-west of South Bend while the second group of militiamen and police surrounded a tract thirteen miles southwest of the prison.

The convicts, all desperate long-term prisoners, were armed and the troops were instructed to "shoot it out" with the desperadoes if necessary. Two convicts were believed to be hiding at each point of concentration.

FEAR SHERIFF SLAIN

It was this same quartet of felons who kidnaped Sheriff Charles Neel of Corydon, fleeing in the officer's car with Neel as a hostage. Despite a close search by more than 1,000 officers and militiamen no trace of the kidnaped sheriff was found and authorities fear that he was slain.

Relatives and friends of the missing sheriff, arriving here from Harrison-co after a 260 mile drive, were of the opinion he had been killed and his body concealed. They organized searching parties to hunt the territory between Deep River and North Liberty, where Neel was last seen with the fleeing felons.

Two others were hunted on the western outskirts of Valparaiso. Searchers could find no trace of the other convicts who apparently had made good their escape by commandeering automobiles.

Residents of the entire territory spent a sleepless night in fear that the convicts might swoop down upon their homes in search of food or automobiles.

While the hunt was in progress, William Morrison, a colored trusty, walked out the state prison gate and disappeared.

SEEN IN WOODS

Four men in the grayish blue denim of prison garb were sighted late yesterday in the woods near McCool. One of the three companies of the 113th engineers, called out by Gov. McNutt, went to the scene with state police and deputy sheriffs.

Trucks hurried national guardsmen to the Walkerton area after two felons hopped a freight train and rode there, radio calls summoned deputies and state police there.

One thousand volunteers from La Porte and South Bend hurried to the area in trucks and automobiles.

FACTORS IN INDIANA PRISON BREAK, SEARCH

Three registered mail pouches containing $100,000 in currency were stolen today in a daring daylight robbery at the South Station railroad terminal.

The robbery occurred just after the electric truck had left the station postoffice enroute to a railroad mail car.

PAYROLLS STOLEN

One sack contained money and payrolls for Cape Cod; a second contained payrolls for Taunton manufacturing concerns, and the third sack contained 14 packages of money for Newport, R. I.

A taxicab driver who saw the men jump into the automobile, gave chase but lost the car a short distance away from the station. When last seen, the bandit car was speeding toward the north side of the city.

An alarm was flashed by police throughout Greater Boston, and a wide search was begun.

John Higgins, of Dedham, driver of the electric truck, told police the robbers were unarmed, and did not say a word to him. He reported that he would not have known of the robbery if one of the bandits had not knocked a package off the truck. He saw only the backs of the running bandits.

Three Names To Be Returned After Papers Are Graded; Columbus Ready.

Political leaders are momentarily expecting word from Washington, D. C. naming the three applicants for the postmastership who received the highest marks after examination papers were perused by post office authorities.

The new postmaster will be named from the trio with the Democratic committee and Congressman Mel H. Underwood having much power in the final appointment.

The fact that Columbus has received names of the three high applicants led local Democrats to believe the local announcement would be forthcoming at almost any time. Columbus' deadline for filing applications was later than Circleville's. Lancaster had its list of applicants in the hands of postal authorities even before this city.

Allen M. Rowe, Ralph W. Clark and Nathan McCoy Sr. received the three highest grades in the state's capital. The former was highest with 85.4, McCoy had 77.8 and Clark 77.4.

VOTE PETITION PRESENTED TO COUNTY BOARD

Miss Young Keeps Initiative Municipal Plant Petition 10 Days

354 NAMES LISTED

Election Board in Possession of Papers

The initiative petition seeking a vote on municipal ownership of a combination electric-water plant is now in the hands of Harry E. Weill, clerk of the board of elections.

The petition, sponsored by L. C. Hammel, Noah G. Spangler and Ward W. Robinson, has been in the office of City Auditor Lillian M. Young 10 days. In fact the 10 days elapsed at 5:30 p. m. Wednesday. Miss Young handed it to Mr. Weill Thursday morning.

Forty days remain before the election on November 7.

The petition as originally presented to the auditor bore 358 names, four signers asking that their names be stricken off. This number leaves the petition with one more name than is necessary, it is reported. Three hundred and fifty-three names were needed to get on the ballot, the petition's sponsors announced.

QUOTES MYERS

Mr. Hammel says there is nothing for the board of elections to do but put the initiative petition on the November ballot for a vote of the people. He asserts that it was told in Secretary of State George Myers' office that if the petition with the required number of names was filed with the board of elections in time to allow 40 days before the election it would go on the ballot.

It is reported that the board of elections will meet to discuss the petition then refer it to Prosecuting Attorney Ray W. Davis for advice since Mr. Davis is the legal adviser of the county body. It is possible the prosecutor will ask Attorney General John W. Bricker for an opinion as to the legality of the petition.

Americans, Britons Unharmed in Sugar Mill Strike District.

HAVANA, Sept. 28.—Thirty Americans and Britons, including five women, today reported that order prevailed and conditions were safe at the Hershey sugar mills, where 1,200 employees are on strike.

This report was received by Graham Granger, manager of the American-owned mills.

Graham expressed resentment at alarmist stories published in the United States declaring foreigners at the mills were in danger.

American warships kept in close touch with the situation, although the Cuban army announced itself ready to protect American and British citizens at the mills.

Other parts of Cuba and the city of Havana were quiet.

Hopes were expressed that a political compromise between the government and opposition elements could be reached with resumption of conferences between President Grau San Martin and opposition leaders. Students continued their talks with members of the A. B. C.

Some settlement giving the president wider political support appeared likely, although no one was willing to predict it as a certainty.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Every relief agency of the government today was concentrated on the administration program of relief for the winter.

August unemployment relief figures, just made public, show that of 40 states reporting, 10 indicated increases in families on relief, against 12 with few families, and eight others not tabulated.

There was a drop of about 4 per cent in the total of families actually receiving relief over the country in August, compared to July. Relief authorities are watching this trend closely, as regardless of the number to be fed this winter, the promise has gone out that relief must be more adequate

OFFICER CONVICTED OF WOUNDING NITTI

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Convicted in the strange shooting of Frank Nitti, "enforcer" for the Al Capone gang, Detective Serg. Harry Lang, member of the late Mayor Anton Cermack's personal detail, was at liberty today on bond while attorneys framed an appeal for a new trial.

A criminal court jury found the suspended detective guilty of assault with a deadly weapon in the Nitti shooting after Lang and a fellow officer gave sensational testimony that Mayor Cermack had learned he was marked for death by a hired killer of the Capone gang.

The raid on the downtown offices of "Crime, Inc." in which Nitti was shot three times, was ordered by Mayor Cermack, Lang testified, after the mayor confided that Louis "Little New York" Campagna had been employed to kill him.

SCHOOLS TO ASSIST

Two Additional Parades Being Prepared

Preparation for the thirtieth annual Pumpkin Show was going down the "home stretch" today with the big event opening next Wednesday. The Pumpkin Show society, headed by Mayor B. T. Hedges, will hold its last meeting Monday evening when final details will be disposed of.

The show will be held four days, as usual, on Oct. 4, 5, 6 and 7 closing on Saturday night.

One person who has been a power in the success of the Pumpkin Show, Thomas F. Jeffries, will be greatly missed this year. Mr. Jeffries' place will be handled by Robert G. Colville, appointed chairman of Department No. 1 by Mayor Hedges and elected treasurer by the society to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Jeffries.

One other directorship is new this year and an additional director has been added, D. L. Buchanan, superintendent of county schools, is in charge of the school work in place of Stanley Lewis, former county farm agent, and L. E. Miller, former service director, has been placed in charge of the horse show for which a department was added this year. Both are well-acquainted with their work and are certain to make successes of their departments.

SCHOOL DISPLAY READY

Mr. Buchanan is finishing arrangement for a gigantic Pick-away-co school exhibit. It will take the entire floor space of the Wilkes building on W. Main-st. Workmen have been busy conditioning the building for the exhibit and entries will begin to be placed early next week. Every school in the county is taking part in the display.

The parades are of much interest to the public. They are under the direction of Proctor Baughman who is serving his second year in that role. A beauty parade will be the big event of the first night with a "Miss Pumpkin Show" to be crowned. A dia-

Body of Judge Crater Found?

Rockland, Me., Marshal Claims Body Found in Harbor Remains N. Y. Jurist.

ROCKLAND, Me., Sept. 28.—Belief that the body of an unidentified, well-dressed man who was beaten to death and tossed into the harbor at Owl's Head, near here, early Sunday, may be that of Judge Joseph Force Crater, missing New York City jurist, was expressed today by City Marshal A. TOM LOUGHRAN DEFEATS 'GOB'

Wins Decision Although Cards Show Match Extremely Close.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28.—When Tommy Loughran fights a man, he boxes an "imaginary triangle," which he mentally places on the floor before his opponent. He keeps moving, first to the point of the triangle, then over to this one, then across to that point, back to the first and so on.

He "planted" his triangle with beautiful precision before Jack Sharkey's feet in Baker bowl last night and even more beautifully did he glide from "point" to "point," as he outboxed the former world's champion in 15 rounds.

Tommy got the decision at the end of a long, hard struggle over a road that had its lumps, its unsightly cuts, its heaving of hay-makers by the infuriated, white-eyed sailor.

I've seldom seen a big fellow outwitted so thoroughly as was Sharkey, whose rage, at missing sometimes had him boiling like a kettle of doughnut grease.

Tommy stood off at long range, tossed right handers into Sharkey's ribs and face, as the crowd, strictly a Loughran gathering, shrieked approval to the high heavens.

The judges, Al Voice and Herman Weingard, disagreed. Voice scoring seven for Sharkey, six for Loughran and two even. Weingard scored seven for Loughran, four for Sharkey and four even.

This calls for a deciding vote by the referee.

John "Spud" Murphy, the arbitrator, had it six for Sharkey, six for Loughran and three even, but he leaned toward Tommy because of a clean knockdown scored with a right-hander, flush to the jaw.

School 1,200 Years Old

The high school in the quaint Rhine river town of Emmerick, Germany, is about 1,200 years old. From its beginning until 1788 it was a religious school. Then it was taken over by the Knights of Malta until closed in 1811 by Napoleon. The government opened it as a public school in 1833.

BAUSCH LEADS CARDINALS TO SPARTAN FIELD

Famous Kansas Star With Lillard, Nesbitt, Creighton To Be Tough.

PORTSMOUTH, Sept. 28.—Grass on the gridiron at Universal stadium is sure to fly in all directions Sunday afternoon, October 1, when the Portsmouth Spartans encounter the gridders that were responsible for the Ohio's not wearing the National League 1932 football crown. That team is the Chicago Cardinals.

Led by "Happy Joe" Lillard, former University of Oregon star and lone negro player of the National Football league, the Cardinals will enter the North gate of the Stadium determined to give Coach Clark's boys a trimming. Last season's Chicago-Portsmouth battle resulted in a 7-7 draw, enabling the Chicago Bears to eventually tie and defeat Ohio's contender for professional honors.

"Lillard is the best quarterback I have ever coached, or seen," replied Dr. Clarence W. Spears, Oregon University grid mentor, when questioned in regard to the ability of the "Ebony Flash." This unheralded star from the Northwest stole the show last Oct. 2 on the Buckeye's lot. While playing at Oregon two years ago, Lillard stepped up from the freshman team into the shoes of famous John Kitzmiller, and filled every inch of them.

BAUSCH, ALSO

America's Olympic hero, Jim Bausch, the nation's outstanding all-around athlete and new Chicago fullback, will attempt to do the seemingly impossible, — crack the Spartan line. Bausch was a former team-mate of the Spartans' latest discovery, Elmer Shnaake, both lads performing for Kansas University.

A fast starter, the former Kansas roles on terrific leg drive to get him through the line. Once through, he brings into action a strong lengthy arm that seems to find unerringly the shoulders of would-be tacklers.

University of Washington's 1932 All-American end, Dave Nesbitt, and Milan Creighton, former Arkansas captain, are Coach Schisler's choices to stop the end runs of Presnell and Caddell, Spartan backs. Neither of the latter stars have been completely stopped to date.

DEAN NOW CHOICE OF BIRD MANAGER

Delays By Rain, Cold Weather Give Pitchers In Series More Rest.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 28.—Delayed another day by cold weather and wet grounds, the Junior World Series was scheduled to be resumed here tonight, with the Columbus Red Birds and the Buffalo Bisons on an even footing of one victory apiece.

Weather conditions today indicated that the game tonight, originally scheduled for Tuesday night, can be played. The second postponement was ordered last night because of unsatisfactory playing conditions.

Meanwhile, a change was reported in the likely choice of Manager Ray Blades for tonight's pitcher Paul Dean, right-hander ace, is rested from his last performance and is expected to get the assignment.

Manager Ray Schalk of the visiting Bisons has made no change in his selection, however. Phil Gullivan, right-hander star of the Buffalo team, will get the nod.

Unless weather again interferes with arrangements, games will be played here tonight and tomorrow night. Then the scene of the series will shift to Buffalo.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

WORD from Lancaster has it that a full investigation of the identity of the "tomato-throwing artists" who peppered away at Circleville automobiles after last Friday night's football game is about to be launched. * * * One sport-fan, a high city official, is reported to have remarked: "I'm one of the sponsors of that stadium and of its lighting system and I'm not going to have a single customer kept out of there if I can help it." * * * And he means what he said and has the official capacity to carry out his threat.

Jack Foster Bales, one of the most-developed football players to ever leave Circleville high school, is preparing for another strenuous year as the chief offensive threat of Princeton U.'s varsity. * * * According to pre-season dope this young, who was a star in his third college year, is being counted upon to gain most Princeton's yards.

Fritz Crisler, Tiger coach, has Bales down for the left halfback assignment. * * * Veterans from last year who will perform with the local youth include Jack Kadlic, of Bellaire, at quarterback and Steve McPartland at the right-half berth. * * * Jack James, third of Princeton's "Jacks," has graduated so Crisler has a task of filling his position. * * * James' blocking and defensive play were highlights of the Princeton year, his efforts many, many times putting Bales in the clear for a neat gain. * * *

The Princeton coach has an excellent crew of sophomores who are hoped to fill line vacancies where good men will be needed. * * *

Holy Rosary high school which comes here tomorrow afternoon to meet Coach Herberholz' hopefuls is almost an unknown quantity. * * * Until last Saturday the local school had not even known there was a Holy Rosary unless some official might have seen the name in a newspaper. * * * Anyway the Columbus Catholic youths are expected to furnish plenty of trouble for the Tigers. * * * Let's hope several of the Red and Black cripples are ready for action. * * *

Ashtville plays its first home game Friday afternoon meeting Liberty Union at Ashtville beginning at 3:30 p. m. * * * The Kaubermen of Ashtville have shown development and hope to carry off the bacon in the encounter. * * *

SPARTAN STARS LEADING LEAGUE

Gutoswsky Ahead In Ground Gained and Presnell Tops Scorers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Ace Gutoswsky of Portsmouth, former Phillips University back, and Arnold Herber, home town prodigy who stars with the Green Bay Packers, are monopolizing the spotlight in the first weeks of the National Football League season.

Gutoswsky has piled up a commanding lead in the race for ground gaining honors. In two games against Cincinnati and New York he gained 115 yards, an average of 3 1-2 yards in each try. Jim Musick of the Braves, former Southern California ace, is his nearest rival with 61 yards in one game against Green Bay.

Herber, who finished a close second in forward passing last season, took a big lead in his specialty by completing 20 out of 32 tosses for a gain of 319 yards in two games against Boston and the Chicago Bears.

LEGIONNAIRES BEGIN TREK TO CHICAGO MEET

Patterson to Be Official Leader of Delegation; Ohio Chaplain Asked.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 28.—Confident they will elect an Ohioan as national chaplain, Ohio American Legion members today began invading Chicago for the national convention next week while making predictions that their ranks will swell to 5,000 by Monday.

State Adjutant J. J. Saslavsky and his staff, from Columbus headquarters, led the way. They left Wednesday to set up Ohio headquarters at the LaSalle Hotel.

Fifteen special trains, carrying 15 drum corps and three bands in addition to the regular members, will leave Saturday and Sunday. Rev. Fr. E. J. Gracey, of Cleveland, is being advanced by the Ohio delegation for chaplain, and is "certain to be elected," according to Ohio officials. Mrs. J. J. Doyle, of Toledo, is to be nominated for national president of the Women's Auxiliary.

STUDY COMMANDERS

Occupying a "pivotal position" in the race for national command, the Ohioans will hold several caucuses to decide whether they will support Edward A. Hayes, of Illinois, or George W. Malone, of Nevada, for the top position.

State Commander Joseph V. Patterson, of Findlay, will assume actual leadership of the Ohio delegation on his arrival at Chicago Sunday.

Ohio drum corps and bands will occupy a prominent place in the mammoth American Legion parade to be held Tuesday.

The champion Ohio band, from Canton post No. 33, along with band and drum corps from Ada, Lima, Findlay, Napoleon, Greenville, Xenia, Lucas county, Mt. Healthy, Steubenville, Bridgeport, Summit county, Massillon, Dover, Ravenna, Norwood, Elyria, Dayton, Springfield, Warren and other cities, will be in the line of march.

MANY TO VISIT

The added attraction of the Century of Progress has caused many Legionnaires to decide to visit the convention. The Ohio delegation is expected to be the largest ever to attend a national convention from this state.

Rev. Fr. Gracey's campaign for national chaplain is to be conducted by a "steering committee" which was named at the state convention in Lima several weeks ago. Rev. Gracey was national chaplain of the "40" and "8" in 1926-27 and chaplain of the Ohio department in 1931-32.

TORRID RACE FOR MAYOR OF CLEVELAND IS NEARING CLOSE

CLEVELAND, Sept. 28.—When Clevelanders go to the polls on Oct. 3 they will bring to an end one of the stormiest mayoralty primary campaigns in the city's political history.

Campaign meetings in the past few weeks have drawn larger audiences, speakers and canvassers are more numerous, and more political buttons are in evidence than in any previous election time. Opponents of the city manager plan claim this renewed interest in politics shows the people have been stirred from their apathy at their predicted when they fought for return of the mayor system.

MILLER IN RACE

The major candidates are the present Democratic Mayor, Ray T. Miller, former "fighting prosecutor," Congressman Martin L. Sweeney, an insurgent Democrat; ex-Mayor and ex-Governor Harry L. Davis, Republican entry, and C. K. Wheelock Socialist.

Miller and Sweeney have been aiming verbal innuendos at one another, debating the question of who called whom a double crosser at the Democratic national convention in Chicago last year, whether Miller was born) should be annexed to Cleveland, and who fought in the World War and how.

Miller and Sweeney have tried to stir up racial prejudices against each other. For instance, Sweeney boasted that he voted against a bill prohibiting racial intermarriage and Miller interpreted this to mean that Sweeney favored such a thing.

Appearances seem to be that the Republican strategy has been to let the two Democratic camps blast themselves to oblivion and then ride to victory unopposed.

One issue seems to be clear: should the present mayor be re-elected?

RE-ELECTION DOUBTFUL

Political observers declare that it is unlikely that he will be re-elected. One reason, they say, is that more people want jobs than hold them. Also, the Miller administration began when the depression was at its worst and those who were at its worst and those who were at its worst and those who were at its worst are willing to try something else.

It is anticipated by those behind the scenes that even if Miller is nominated, his election will be blocked by a coalition of anti-administration Democrats and Republicans.

OUTLAW CONFESSES URSCHEL ABDUCTION

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 8.—George "Machine Gun" Kelly has admitted taking part in the $200,000 abduction of Charles F. Urschel, millionaire oil man, and will be rushed to Oklahoma City late this week to stand trial, department of justice officials said today.

Plans were being completed today for removal of the desperado and his wife, Kathryn, to Oklahoma by airplane as a precaution against any possible attempts to free the machine gunner.

United States District Judge H. B. Anderson cleared the way for extraditing the pair when he signed a removal order at Jackson, Tenn., shortly before Kelly yielded under unceasing questioning here and confessed that he participated in the Urschel kidnaping.

ADMITTS IMPLICATION

"Well, you've got me right on the Urschel job," John W. Keith, of the Washington division of the department of justice division, quoted the gangster.

"But I didn't have anything to do with the Chicago mail robbery or the Kansas City Union station massacre."

Manacled and chained to his cot in the Shelby-co jail here, Kelly underwent hours of grilling at the hands of police and federal secret service men before he grudgingly admitted his part in the kidnaping. Keith refused to say whether the former bootlegger had elaborated on the brief confession quoted.

Kelly had been accused of participating in the machine gun massacre of five men at the Kansas City Union station last June and the recent murder of Policeman Miles Cunningham in a federal reserve bank mail robbery at Chicago.

The desperado and his wife willingly signed waivers for their removal although earlier they had announced they would fight extradition.

LOOT SHARE FOUND

Discovery of $73,250 of the Urschel kidnap ransom on the Texas farm of Cass Coleman had apparently broken down Kelly's sneering, defiant attitude toward questions. This money was Kelly's share of the loot, federal operatives declared.

Mrs. Kelly remained stoical under questioning, however, and denied everything. She is being held in a distant cell from her husband on orders of federal authorities. The two are to be kept here until the trial of Harvey Bailey and his co-defendants is concluded at Oklahoma City.

"She is a brainy woman," said Keith after questioning the titan-haired Mrs. Kelly, "and we believe she did most of the planning in the Urschel kidnaping."

Wants More Hunting

BASIN, Wyo.—Al Kerschner, Shell Creek rancher, has protested to the state game and fish commission against closing the elk hunting season in the Big Horn mountains this fall. The feed shortage, Kerschner declared, will cause many of the elk to starve if they are not killed off. He recommended utilizing elk meat for relief this winter.

The report that fewer trucks are on the roads would have been good news before the sheriff got the family car.

Plain Vegetables Handsomely Flavored

THESE dishes are economical and though simple, are welcomed at guest dinners, especially those dinners where hungry men gather about the table for good food and conversation as well.

The homely onion is usually a favorite with men. Try preparing large Spanish onions this way:

Six onions; one fourth cup grated Parmesan cheese; three hard cooked eggs; two tablespoons chopped parsley. Peel the onions, take out the centers with an apple corer, or scoop, then fill with a mixture of the cheese, eggs and parsley. Place in an enameled sauce pan, half cover with hot water, and boil for ten minutes; lift out, sprinkle with flour and heat in a frying pan with two tablespoons of salad oil or butter. When delicately brown, place in a baking dish, sprinkle with more Parmesan cheese and small dabs of butter, and bake in a hot oven until golden brown.

Lima Beans With Ham
Three fourths pound tender young lima beans; one fourth cup chopped raw smoked ham; one tablespoon butter; one tablespoon chopped parsley; one small onion chopped fine.

Put the beans in boiling water for five minutes. Then put into a saucepan one tablespoon of butter, the parsley and onion. Fry the onion till lightly browned, then add the ham. After five minutes, add the lima beans and two or three tablespoons of bouillon or hot water. Simmer until the beans are tender. Serve garnished with narrow toast strips.

Squash Medley
Two small squashes; one small parsnip; one stalk of celery; one half cup canned or fresh mushrooms; deep fat for frying. Cut the squash into small pieces lengthwise, boil until tender in enough water to cover, put in a bowl and sprinkle well with salt. Scrape the parsnip and boil in a few minutes, then slice and add to the squash with more salt. Boil the cut up celery stalk, then slice and add to the squash and parsnip. Add the mushrooms to the vegetables (if fresh ones, first saute lightly in butter).

Drain the vegetable mixture, rub off excess moisture on a clean towel, mix together, roll in flour, then dip in beaten egg and fry in deep hot fat. Use a frying basket, and lift out when nicely browned. Drain on hot paper toweling and serve as a garnish with a roast of meat or fowl.

Unknown Heroes

THE heroic role being played by three unidentified scientists in an effort to find the cause of "sleeping sickness" now epidemic in St. Louis is not an unusual one for members of the medical profession. The latter's record has in it many similar cases in which members have risked their lives in an effort to advance the welfare of humanity. In some, the supreme sacrifice has been made.

For several months the nation's best medical brains have been trying to end the St. Louis epidemic, which has taken more than 100 lives. Recognizing the necessity of learning the cause of the disease before a cure could be expected to be found, experiments having this as their aim were begun. It was believed that if the means of transmission of the disease from one person to another could be found, an important step toward discovering the cause would be made. Monkeys and rabbits at first were used in these experiments. Mosquitoes, after being permitted to bite victims of the disease, were placed in contact with these animals. The tests were unsuccessful.

Three scientists, their names withheld, then volunteered themselves as subjects, apparently on the theory that monkeys and rabbits might possess a resistance to the disease not common with man. Their offer was accepted and they took the place of the monkeys and rabbits. From 10 to 14 days will be required to determine the success or failure of the experiment.

With their identity concealed they can not be accused of courting publicity, which has become an all too common practice in many walks of professional and private life. They are risking their lives in the hope that whatever sacrifice they may have to make will be of help to humanity. They are unknown heroes in a great cause.

The public may never know their names, but it, nevertheless, will acclaim and honor them for their unselfish devotion to a lofty purpose. It is to such men as these that the medical profession owes much of its high standing.

Truck Problem Studied

TEN thousand truck operators throughout the country have been asked by Joseph B. Eastman, federal coordinator of transportation, to answer a questionnaire to determine the relation of trucking to freight transportation.

The inquiry is part of the federal program for bringing into coordination railroad, waterway and motor transportation. Its immediate purpose is to determine in what sphere transportation of goods by motor vehicle is more economical or serviceable than by other means.

The investigation will not be confined to for-hire vehicles. It will include also private operators of 10 or more vehicles in transporting their "own goods," as it is recognized that such transportation is of growing importance, and facts relating to it must be obtained before any sound transportation plan can be devised.

Assurance was given all to whom the questionnaire was sent that the information and data submitted in reply would be treated in the strictest confidence. The coordinator wants to know the character and extent of traffic handled, the charges made by trucks operating for hire, the nature of the service performed and the expense of truck operation.

The operation of motor trucks have done more than any other one thing to upset America's transportation system. Trucks have given railroads a hard blow by diverting important revenue from the rail lines. They have established themselves permanently in the transportation field. They perform an important public service. The question is not their elimination but to find the proper place for them in the national scheme of transportation.

The present inquiry aims to do this. Its success will mean the solution of a troublesome problem.

Simon-pure governmental economy is what the outs want before they get in.

CHAPTER XLIV

So Curtis came. Blanche put both arms around him, and kissed him soundly. "I am glad to see you—what's the matter with your old firm that they don't send you up here any more? You're a stranger—"

That was the nicest thing about Blanche—her warm sincerity. She was a big girl, with cheeks like apples, and a wide, welcoming smile. There was something fresh and wholesome about her.

Curtis was fond of Gloria. She was a spindly little thing with large pale blue eyes, and fuzzy yellow hair that Blanche curled every day on the iron. "Some would have a permanent wave put in, but I think too much of my child's future for that! I don't care how little it takes me to do it, I curl it all by hand."

Yes, Blanche was a good mother—according to her lights. She sent Gloria to Sunday School every Sunday, and washed her mouth out with soap if she heard her say that from me! "You never see that from me!" she'd storm. "I'll teach you to use bad words, you naughty, naughty girl!"

"I intend to send her to a good school," she told Curtis every time he came North, but she put it off. It would be lonely without her, and Ferd would feel badly when he came home and she wasn't there.

It had been months since Curtis had seen them. Pleasant to be back again. Pleasant to eat Blanche's delicious spaghetti, and hold pale little Gloria on his knee.

She put her thin little arm around his neck, and showed him the bright little picture cards she had got in Sunday School. "And this is Moses, when he was a little baby. The and this one is the Good Shepherd looking for the little lamb that got lost—"

A lump rose in Curtis' throat. A poor little kid. He thought of Joan where he was. He thought of another little girl whom he might see set Gloria down. "I'll have to be getting along, Blanche—"

"Why, Curt! Her bright face clouded. "Why—surely—"

Then he thought of Joan again. . . . what she had done to him. . . . all his hopes and dreams in the dust. . . . killed by her hand. . . . "Oh, all right," he said, "I'll stay."

He stayed two days. He bought a blue broadcloth coat with a diminutive squirrel collar for Gloria. The blue just matched her eyes. He felt almost happy for a moment when she put her thin little arms tight around his neck and squeezed him—

"Dear Uncle Curt!"

"You shouldn't have!" Blanche scolded affectionately. "Still it does look sweet on her. Turn around, Lovey, and let Mamma see the back. Ain't you the proud baby? Curt, if I've told you once, I've told you twenty times, I'm no gold-digger, you don't have to go and spend all your money. . . . I declare I never saw a fellow as crazy about kids as you are. You ought to get married and have about six yourself!"

The hot tears stung his eyes. Blanche understood him. Blanche appreciated him. She knew all he would do for the girl he married, how generous he would be, how kind. . . . All he would have done for Joan. . . . if she hadn't spoiled it. . . . wrecked his life. . . .

Sometimes he almost hated her. All those months, knowing that he loved her, knowing that he expected to marry her, and not telling, not telling until now. . . . the eleventh hour. . . .

Once he decided not to go home at all. He would write Joan telling her the situation had become impossible. Get a leave of absence from the firm. Travel for a year or so. Begin again. Find another girl eventually. . . .

But it wasn't any use, he couldn't forget her. She would haunt him always. He hadn't found forgetfulness with Blanche. He wouldn't be able to find it in travel. There would always be Joan, drawing him back, beckoning to him across the distance. When he closed his eyes he could see her, her delicate white face, her appealing, gray-green eyes. . . .

He couldn't be happy with her now, she had made that impossible, but neither could he be happy without her. Might as well go back, and see her again, talk to her. . . . So he came back.

He came to Maisie's flat in the evening, after the dishes were done. Maisie was stitching on the lunch-on set, determined not to "let on" that she knew anything was wrong. Joan was sitting in a corner reading a book. Reading the same thing over and over, not conscious of a word on the printed page.

When Maisie saw him at the door she snatched her old coat off the hook on the back porch, and hurried down the back stairs to Miss Harvey's. They didn't even know she had come.

"Curtis!" Joan whispered. "You've—come back!"

"Yes," he said huskily, "I've come back. I couldn't stay away. I love you, Joan—I love you."

He held her close, so close that he could feel her heart beating against his. She was so pathetically glad to see him. She put out her slim, cool hand and touched his cheek. "I missed you terribly," she said, "I'm so glad you've come back." And then, "Have you—decided?" she asked, very low.

No pleading in her voice, no humility—just the question—"Have you decided?"

He had expected something different, he didn't know what. Tears perhaps, supplication. . . . certainly not that cool question, when he had hardly got into the room, hardly kissed her.

He felt his heart hardening, ever so slightly, against her. Didn't she realize all he had suffered? All the suffering she had brought upon him?

"Why couldn't you let me have one moment of happiness," he burst out suddenly, "without reminding me—reminding me—"

She hung her head. "I'm sorry, Curtis. It's all I've thought of. It's very hard—waiting—"

She reached out her arms to him again, but the first moment of ecstasy was gone, gone as if it had never been. She only knew that her head was aching, and in some inexplicable way she had failed him again.

"Did you have a nice trip?" she asked at last—politely, as she would a stranger.

"Oh—fair—"

"Your mother has been worried," she went on hurriedly. "She'll be glad you're back—"

"Joan—for heaven's sake, don't make conversation. You'll drive me crazy. I'm nearly crazy now. I've thought and thought until I don't know where I am, or what to tell you. You don't know what you've done to me—how this thing affects me—"

He half choked and went on, "You see how it is—I'm hardly responsible. . . . Johnnie, you'll have to tell me the whole story—tell me the whole thing—who this—this fellow is—"

"No, no—I couldn't—you mustn't ask that—I couldn't—"

He began to walk up and down again, as he had on that other night, in the apartment that was to be his home. Up and down, up and down, restlessly, ceaselessly.

And she sat with her hands folded in her lap, waiting. Like a prisoner in the dock.

"For the last time, Joan—will you tell me who it is?"

"No, Curtis—"

"Oh, Joan—don't you see what you've done—how unfair it is to me? I might meet him—shake his hand—invite him to our home—"

She covered her face with her hands then. She couldn't face him. To think of him knowing Bill, as he might some day. He knew Rollo Kevins, it was impossible. . . .

"Will you tell me?"

"No, Curtis—"

But her bent neck, her quivering shoulders softened him. There came a sudden rush of tenderness, a desire to protect her, to stand between her and the world. His arms tightened about her, and she clung to him, and cried.

"We'll just let it go on then," he said soothingly. "See how it works out. Try to forget it—"

"To forget it!" she echoed. "To forget we have to decide? We can't—"

"We have two months yet. Plenty of time. We'll see. . . . I'll find a way. . . . there must be a way—"

"You mean," she said finally, "that you aren't going to tell me now? That you won't tell me whether you still love me and want to marry me or not? You want me to go on this way—not knowing—surely you don't mean that—"

"I mean that I'm not prepared to make any definite decision this evening, Joan. It won't be any worse to break in a month from now, if I break we must, than to do it now—"

She bit her lip. "I—I can't go on this way, Curtis. I want to do what you want—but I can't do that—"

He drew back angrily. "It seems to me, Joan, that if one of us must give in to the other, surely, in view of all that has happened—"

Joan drew back, too. Slipped out of his arms, quiet and very cold. "I think you will have to decide now, Curtis. I—I won't go on, that way."

She looked so slim and white and frail, as if a stiff breeze would blow her away, but he sensed her strength of purpose, knew she would have her way. She was stronger than he knew it. . . . to be said the only thing he could say. Said it with twisting lips, and eyes that could not quite meet hers:

"I can not give you up, Joan."

All the blood drained from her face, until even her lips were white. "You mean—that you—still want me, Curtis? That you can go on with it?"

"Yes—that's what I mean."

She cried then, silently, in his arms.

When at last he left her she called him back. "Curtis!"

"Curtis—I want you to know—that I'll—try to make it up to you—try to make you glad—"

"Dear, I know, I know—"

But Maisie was coming. . . . he blew her a kiss, and disappeared down the dimly lighted stairway.

The Genesis of An Old Favorite

By IRVIN S. COBB

THERE are several variations of this yarn but a Scotch friend of mine insists that the one which follows is the correct one and, by that same token, the proper ancestor of all the crop of differing versions. As he sets forth the original narrative it runs something like this:

An Aberdonian on his first visit to London got off the train at Euston station. While proceeding afoot along Euston Road on his way to his hotel he suffered a terrific misfortune. He dropped a sixpence and it rolled out of sight. The desolated victim put down his luggage and began a vigorous search for the missing coin. Presently a friendly policeman came along and having learned from the griefed Scot what the trouble was proceeded to aid him in the hunt, but with no results, excepting the loss of fifteen minutes. Finally the Bobby said:

"You go along on your way and I'll keep my eye open for your money. If it turns up I'll have it for you, if you'll come back this way this afternoon."

During the day the gas company had had a squad of men excavating in the street for new mains so that when the Aberdonian reappeared he found the paving torn up and a wide, deep trench extending from the house-line to the middle of the road. He gazed at the scene for a moment and then remarked to himself:

"Weel, I must admit one thing—they are verra thorough here."

Will Rogers Picks

A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

THIS is one of the old stories they used to tell about women. I reckon it's out of date now, when so many men hardly know what the inside of the bank looks like until they have to go there to borrow money. Lots of home women do all the banking for the family now, but they didn't back in Jefferson's time, when this story started.

This Mrs. Roe came into the bank to cash a check, but the teller told her she would have to be identified.

"Oh, that's right," she says. "My friend, Mrs. Ann here, will identify me, and it'll be all right."

"Yes," says the teller, "but I'm afraid we don't know Mrs. Ann here."

"Oh, I never thought of that. What's your name, please?"

"Mine? Why, my name is Keller."

"Well, pardon me, Mr. Keller, for not introducing you before. This is Mr. Keller, Mrs. Ann. Now, everything will be all right, and you can cash the check on your way out."

"OH PROMISE ME!"

Promises mean nothing—it's performance that counts. The "bargain" battery that looks good in the store is no bargain in your car if you can't depend on it. Millions of motorists entrust their comfort and safety to EXIDES—they know the EXIDE slogan is no mere phrase. WHEN IT'S AN EXIDE, YOU START. EXIDES are ruggedly built for long wear, and charged "to the hilt" with power ready at the touch of the starter. Because of unique "built-in" features, EXIDES retain their original power practically to the end of their long lives, whereas the common tendency of many batteries is to taper off in strength soon after installation, with no reserve power for emergency demands.

Garden Clubs Are Feted; Mrs. Haynes is Re-elected

By ANN BENNETT

Garden clubs of the seventh district of the Ohio association, in session here Wednesday, re-elected Mrs. Samuel K. Haynes, of the Franklin-co Garden club, Columbus, as regional director for another two years. The contest between Mrs. Haynes and Mrs. M. E. Stickney of the Licking-co Garden club, Newark, was close.

Mrs. Orion King, president of the local Garden club who was very instrumental in obtaining the regional meeting for this city, was placed in nomination for regional director but declined the honor.

The meeting was a highly successful one although inclement weather prevented the 75 or more persons who attended from visiting the Logan Elm where the afternoon program was to have been held. The entire function, with the exception of the luncheon served in the basement of the Methodist Episcopal church by ladies of the church, was held in the Mid-day club room of Memorial Hall.

The Monday club room was profusely decorated with fern, marigolds and celosia.

OPENED BY MRS. KING
Mrs. King opened the meeting and after a few words of welcome introduced Mrs. Haynes who spoke briefly, lauding the local club for its activity as an "infant." She explained the election of a regional director and after nominations were received the vote which resulted in her re-election was taken.

At this time in the program representatives of each club attending spoke on the activities of their various groups. Suggestions for organizing clubs were made by Mrs. Haynes who then presented Miss Zoradya Sheets, of Shelby, regional director of the Sixth district.

Miss Sheets' discussion concerned planning activities and formation of a regional speaker's bureau to provide for the exchange of speakers among the various clubs within a district using talent among garden clubs represented. This method would greatly reduce expenses, Miss Sheets explained, and would give various clubs ideas of what other organizations are doing.

When Miss Sheets had concluded Mrs. W. D. Fulton of the Franklin-co club, Columbus, announced that the tenth anniversary of the Franklin-co club will be held this fall at the Neil House, Columbus, during the Floral show. After the splendid luncheon at the church the party returned to Memorial Hall where Mrs. Haynes introduced Dr. Howard Jones who spoke on "Historical Significance of the Logan Elm."

DR. JONES SPEAKS
Dr. Jones, in his inimitable manner, told of the early history of the famous tree which he said was a youth when Christopher Columbus landed at San Salvador. "The tree as near as anyone can tell is between 350 and 450 years old," the speaker said. "Its earliest history," he continued, "is traced to 1750."

He then went into the Indian history of the county explaining, in an interesting manner, the religious expression of the people. "The Scioto valley Indians," Dr. Jones stated, "were an intelligent race. The Shawnee warriors lived here and developed their high ideals of perfect government and women's rights."

He told of the wars of 1874 when British, French and Indians were engaged in conflict and of Lord Dunmore's arrangement for peace. Lewis and Dunmore met near Logan Elm and all the Indian chiefs were called to Camp Charlotte to sign a treaty. "Logan's speech," Dr. Jones said, "was sent to the meeting at Camp Charlotte. It is believed to have been written near or under the Elm which was named for Chief Logan. Lord Dunmore's army camped near there and George Rogers Clark, the famous pioneer, received his first training in that vicinity."

"The Logan Elm," Dr. Jones concluded, "is a beautiful example of a beautiful tree but it is coming to an end as things must do."

He was given an excellent round of applause when he finished his address. Mr. Tucker, secretary of the Ohio association of Garden Clubs and editor of "The Garden Path," was introduced and used a few minutes' time to congratulate the district clubs for their progress. He said that Prof. Hodus, a garden authority, is planning to attend the Columbus flower show and that reservations could be made with Mrs. David Thomas, 291 E. 14th-ave, Columbus.

TELLS OF WORK
W. Stanley Speed, of Columbus, tree specialist who recently completed the task of rebuilding the Logan Elm for the Ohio Archeological and Historical association after contributions to Columbus and Chillicothe newspapers and The Herald, told of the work necessary to make the venerable tree strong enough to resist winds and storms. He said the Elm is the only tree in the country to be fixed in such a way. His talk was technical, various phases of the reconstruction being explained.

"The Elm is now in good condition," Mr. Speed declared, "and it should live for another 10 years." He said that seedling from the tree should have large locations in which to grow.

Mrs. Howard Jones was heard at the conclusion of Mr. Speed's talk. She told how the Elm looked 21 years ago and related the damage storms have done to the landmark. The state bought the tree 20 years ago. Mrs. Jones announced annual Ohio History Day next Sunday at the Logan Elm and visited all the Garden club delegates to attend the services then to attend the informal reception at the Jones home.

Mrs. Haynes in closing the meeting said there are two things to keep in mind: 1. Find members in clubs to contribute to the programs in other club meetings; 2. Keep in mind to spread the gospel of gardening.

The Methodist church dining room for the luncheon, was beautifully decorated. Mrs. Mack Noggle and R. L. Brehmer comprised the decorating committee but credit for the work was given by both to Edwin Haacker who was introduced by Mrs. King. The registration committee was comprised of Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer, Mrs. Howard Jones and Miss Mary Heffner.

GUESTS LISTED

Out of town persons who attended included the following: Ruth E. Kay and Helen Todhunter of Washington C. H., Mrs. Carlisle Gibson of Worthington, Mrs. Howard White of Hilltop, Mrs. T. W. Ruff, H. E. Hamlin, Mrs. Haynes, Grace G. Iams, Mrs. J. F. Pixley, Mrs. Ella Paul, Walter Tucker, Mrs. R. E. Kyle, Mrs. W. D. Brooke, Josephine Justus, Mary S. Meyer, Mrs. Nannette Peters, Mrs. Mae Campbell, Mrs. C. Benny, Mrs. E. C. Rutter, Mrs. Brooks Shell and Mrs. E. L. Rapp of Lancaster.

the west-bound train. When he went to investigate he was attacked and during the scuffle was stabbed twice.

Chillicothe authorities, thinking the suspect might try to ride a freight train through this city called local police and asked that the trains be searched. Officers Fitzpatrick and Smith and Sheriff Radcliff and Deputies Custer and Fissell searched two trains but could find no trace of the culprit. Bandy is well known in this city having worked for the railroad for a number of years. He is a resident of Columbus.

Jefferson's First Message
In his first message, as President of the United States, Thomas Jefferson earnestly supplicated for unity in the face of dissension, friendship to all nations and entangling alliance with none; for an active and efficient militia, for the freedom of speech, of the press and of religion; and for economy in public expenses. "These principles," he said, "should be the creed of our political faith, the text of civil instruction, the touchstone by which to try the services of those we trust."

Ford Angles for White House Plea to "Talk it Over"

WASHINGTON.—Despite Henry Ford's claim that absence of the Blue Eagle has not hurt his business, it appears that he did not relish his role of recalcitrance.

Through private emissaries recently he has made several secret overtures for an invitation from President Roosevelt to come to the White House and talk things over.

In this way he would save his face amid a fanfare of publicity.

F. D. R., however, has remained cool and aloof. He sent word to the auto magnate that he had nothing to say to him, but if he wanted to call, he would, of course, be glad to see him. But the President is issuing no invitation to Henry Ford. If Ford comes to Washington it will have to be strictly on his own initiative.

Under the Code

There is a great deal of misapprehension about Ford's status as regards the auto code.

Despite his refusal to sign he is as much under its jurisdiction as those manufacturers who did. The code covers the entire automobile industry, signers as well as non-signers. Every plant must abide by its terms and requirements; those who violate them in any particular are subject to prosecution.

The big distinction between signers and non-signers is that only the former may fly the Blue Eagle, thus signifying their public support of the President's recovery program, as well as the government's stamp of approval on their products.

Broken Record

It was by sheer accident that two American Marines were landed on Cuban soil the other day. Although withdrawn immediately, they broke the record of Ambassador Welles in keeping Cuba completely free of American intervention.

Responsibility for the break has been placed upon the commander of the destroyer Fred J. Talbot, lying in Puerto Padre harbor. He and the Marines ashore when the night club was reported to be in danger. Apparently it wasn't.

Ambassador Welles was much provoked. Two Marines, in the minds of some Latin Americans, are as good as a regiment.

The Answer

Oklahoma's tall, dapper Senator Elmer Thomas, tireless inflation advocate, has a pet illustration he invariably uncorks when proselytizing for greenbacks. He pulled it out U. S. Treasurer William A. Julian the other day.

"Mr. Julian," demanded Thomas, "do you know what the total compound interest would amount to today if Abraham Lincoln had financed the Civil War by 5 percent bonds instead of the $450,000,000 in greenbacks he issued?"

"Yes," replied Julian. "I know the answer to that one. The interest would amount to eleven billion dollars, one half of the present national debt. Now let me show you something."

Whereupon Julian pulled from his billfold a $5 note of the Civil War issue. Thomas offered to buy it at Julian's price, but it was not for sale.

Warning

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board is quietly taking steps to crack down on certain lawyers who seek to exact fees from distressed home owners needing government loans. These petty chiselers are telling loan applicants they must have legal advice in preparing their papers.

This is not so. In fact, the law expressly forbids the taking of fees for negotiating home loans and fixes heavy penalties for violating the statute.

TEN CONVICTS ELUDE ARMED STATE GUARDS

Police Concentrate Efforts in Wooded Areas of Northern Indiana

McNUTT SENDS HELP

Neighborhoods Fear Attacks of Convicts

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Sept. 28.—Two armed forces of national guardsmen and police today were surrounding separate wooded tracts in northern Indiana where at least four of the ten escaped convicts from the Indiana State penitentiary here were believed trapped.

One heavily-armed force had closed in on a woodland near Walkerton, fifteen miles southwest of South Bend while the second group of militiamen and police surrounded a tract thirteen miles southwest of the prison.

The convicts, all desperate long-term prisoners, were armed and the troops were instructed to "shoot it out" with the desperadoes if necessary. Two convicts were believed to be hiding at each point of concentration.

FEAR SHERIFF SLAIN
It was this same quartet of felons who kidnaped Sheriff Charles Neel of Corydon, fleeing in the officer's car with Neel as a hostage. Despite a close search by more than 1,000 officers and militiamen no trace of the kidnaped sheriff was found and authorities fear that he was slain.

Relatives and friends of the missing sheriff, arriving here from Harrison on a 260 mile drive, were of the opinion he had been killed and his body concealed. They organized searching parties to hunt the territory between Deep River and North Liberty, where Neel was last seen with the fleeing felons.

Two others were hunted on the western outskirts of Valparaiso. Searches could find no trace of the other convicts who apparently had made good their escape by commandeering automobiles.

Residents of the entire territory spent a sleepless night in fear that the convicts might swoop down upon their homes in search of food or automobiles.

While the hunt was in progress, William Morrison, a colored trusty, walked out the state prison gate and disappeared.

SEEN IN WOODS
Four men in the grayish blue denim of prison garb were sighted late yesterday in the woods near McCool. One of the three companies, called out by Gov. McNutt, went to the scene with state police and deputy sheriffs.

Trucks hurried national guardsmen to the Walkerton area after two felons hopped a freight train and rode there, radio calls summoned deputies and state police there.

One thousand volunteers from La Porte and South Bend hurried to the area in trucks and automobiles.

FACTORS IN INDIANA PRISON BREAK, SEARCH

Three shabbily dressed unarmed men picked up the three mail bags from a small electric truck, uttered no sound and fled to a waiting automobile. A fourth man was at the wheel of the car, parked at the unloading platform, which roared away as the trio clutching the mail sacks jumped in.

The robbery occurred just after the electric truck had left the station postoffice enroute to a railroad mail car.

PAYROLLS STOLEN
One sack contained money and payrolls for Cape Cod; a second contained payrolls for Taunton manufacturing concerns, and the third sack contained 14 packages of money for Newport, R. I.

A taxicab driver who saw the men jump into the automobile, gave chase but lost the car a short distance away from the station. When last seen, the bandit car was speeding toward the north side of the city.

An alarm was flashed by police throughout Greater Boston, and a wide search was begun.

John Higgins, of Dedham, driver of the electric truck, told police the robbers were unarmed, and did not say a word to him. He reported that he would not have known of the robbery if one of the bandits had not knocked a package off the truck. He saw only the backs of the running bandits.

GREEN SEES NEW BUSINESS 'BOOM'
815,000 Workers Re-employed During August Through Operation of NRA.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—With $15,000 workers reemployed during August, through the operation of the Roosevelt recovery program, the nation's unemployed army was reduced to 11,000,000, William Green, president of the American Federation reported today.

In all, Green declared 2,800,000 have returned to work since March.

He said: "Trade union reports for the first part of September indicate that the reemployment program is still going forward. They show a larger employment gain in September than in August, the largest gain since March, except June. In September 22.6 percent of the membership was out of work compared with 23.7 percent in August; 24.1 percent in July and 26.6 in March. The gains were chiefly in full time work, for part time work did not increase. Only one of the trade groups, however, reported an increase in unemployment, and there were substantial gains also in building, metal trade, manufacturing, service, street transportation, water transportation and railroads."

VOTE PETITION PRESENTED TO COUNTY BOARD

Miss Young Keeps Initiative Municipal Plant Petition 10 Days

354 NAMES LISTED

Election Board in Possession of Papers

The initiative petition seeking a vote on municipal ownership of a combination electric-water plant is now in the hands of Harry E. Weill, clerk of the board of elections.

The petition, sponsored by L. C. Hammel, Noah G. Spangler and Ward W. Robinson, has been in the office of City Auditor Lillian M. Young 10 days. In fact the 10 days elapsed at 5:30 p. m. Wednesday. Miss Young handed it to Mr. Weill Thursday morning.

Forty days remain before the election on November 7. The petition as originally presented to the auditor bore 358 names, four signers asking that their names be stricken off. This number leaves the petition with one more name than is necessary. It is reported. Three hundred and fifty-three names were needed to get on the ballot, the petition's sponsors announced.

QUOTES MYERS
Mr. Hammel says there is nothing for the board of election to do but put the initiative petition on the November ballot for a vote of the people. He asserts that he was told in Secretary of State George Myers' office that if the petition with the required number of names was filed with the board of elections in time to allow 40 days before the election it would go on the ballot.

It is reported that the board of elections will meet to discuss the petition then refer it to Prosecuting Attorney Ray W. Davis for advice since Mr. Davis is the legal adviser of the county body. It is possible the prosecutor will ask Attorney General John W. Bricker for an opinion as to the legality of the petition.

DEMOCRATS AWAIT POSTMASTER TRIO

Three Names To Be Returned After Papers Are Graded; Columbus Ready.

Political leaders are momentarily expecting word from Washington D. C. naming the three applicants for the postmastership who received the highest marks after examination papers were perused by post office authorities.

The new postmaster will be named from the trio with the Democratic committee and Congressman Mel H. Underwood having much power in the final appointment.

The fact that Columbus has received names of the three high applicants led local Democrats to believe the local announcement would be forthcoming at almost any time. Columbus' deadline for filing applications was later than of applicants in the hands of postal authorities even before this city.

Allen M. Rowe, Ralph W. Clark and Nathan McCoy Sr. received the three highest grades in the state's capital. The former was highest with 85.4, McCoy had 77.8 and Clark 77.4.

Americans, Britons Unharmed In Sugar Mill Strike District.

HAVANA, Sept. 28.—Thirty Americans and Britons, including five women, today reported that order prevailed and conditions were safe at the Hershey sugar mills, where 1,200 employees are on strike.

This report was received by Graham Granger, manager of the American-owned mills. Graham expressed resentment at alarmist stories published in the United States declaring foreigners at the mills were in danger.

American warships kept in close touch with the situation, although the Cuban army announced itself ready to protect American and British citizens at the mills.

Other parts of Cuba and the city of Havana were quiet.

Hopes were expressed that a political compromise between the government and opposition elements could be reached with resumption of conferences between President Grau San Martin and opposition leaders. Students continued their talks with members of the A. B. C.

Some settlement giving the president wider political support appeared likely, although no one was willing to predict it as a certainty.

Two Additional Parades Being Prepared

Preparation for the thirtieth annual Pumpkin Show was going down the "home stretch" today with the big event opening next Wednesday. The Pumpkin Show society, headed by Mayor B. T. Hedges, will hold its last meeting Monday evening when final details will be disposed of.

The show will be held four days, as usual, on Oct. 4, 5, 6 and 7 closing on Saturday night.

One person who has been a power in the success of the Pumpkin Show, Thomas F. Jeffries, will be greatly missed this year. Mr. Jeffries' place will be handled by Robert G. Colville, appointed chairman of Department No. 1 by Mayor Hedges and elected treasurer by the society to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Jeffries.

One other directorship is new this year and an additional director has been added. D. L. Buchanan, superintendent of county schools, is in charge of the school work in place of Stanley Lewis, former county farm agent, and L. E. Miller, former service director, has been placed in charge of the horse show for which a department was added this year. They are well-acquainted with their work and are certain to make successes of their departments.

SCHOOL DISPLAY READY
Mr. Buchanan is finishing arrangement for a gigantic Pick-away-co school exhibit. It will take the entire floor space of the Wilkes building on W. Main-st. Workmen have been busy conditioning the building for the exhibit and entries will begin to be placed early next week. Every school in the county is taking part in the display.

The parades are of much interest to the public. They are under the direction of J. Proctor Binghamman who is serving his second year in that role. A beauty parade will be the big event of the first night with a "Miss Pumpkin Show" to be crowned. A display of the county's best pumpkins will be on hand.

OUTLAW CONFESSES URSCHEL ABDUCTION

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 8. — George "Machine Gun" Kelly has admitted taking part in the $200,000 abduction of Charles F. Urschel, millionaire oil man, and will be rushed to Oklahoma City late this week to stand trial, department of justice officials said today.

Plans were being completed today for removal of the desperado and his wife, Kathryn, to Oklahoma by airplane as a precaution against any possible attempts to free the machine gunner.

United States District Judge H. E. Anderson cleared the way for extraditing the pair when he signed a removal order at Jackson, Tenn., shortly before Kelly yielded under unceasing questioning here and confessed that he participated in the Urschel kidnapping.

ADmits IMPLICATION
"Well, you've got me right on the Urschel job," John W. Keith, of the Washington division of the department of justice division, quoted the gangster.

"But I didn't have anything to do with the Chicago mail robbery or the Kansas City Union station massacre."

Manacled and chained to his cot in the Shelby-co jail here, Kelly underwent hours of grilling at the hands of police and federal secret service men before he grudgingly admitted his part in the kidnapping.

Keith refused to say whether the former bootlegger had elaborated on the brief confession quoted.

Kelly had been accused of participating in the machine gun massacre of five men at the Kansas City Union station last June and the recent murder of Police-Mar Miles Cunningham in a federal reserve bank mail robbery at Chicago.

The desperado and his wife willingly signed waivers for their removal although earlier they had announced they would fight extradition.

LOOT SHARE FOUND

Discovery of $73,250 of the Urschel kidnap ransom on the Texas farm of Cass Coleman had apparently broken down Kelly's feigning defiant attitude toward questioners. This money was Kelly's share of the loot, federal operatives declared.

Mrs. Kelly remained stoical under questioning, however, and denied everything. She is being held in a distant cell from her husband on orders of federal authorities. The two are to be kept here until the trial of Harvey Bailey and his co-defendants is concluded at Oklahoma City.

"She is a brainy woman," said Keith after questioning the titan-haired Mrs. Kelly, "and we believe she did most of the planning in the Urschel kidnapping."

Wants More Hunting

BASIN, Wyo.—Al Kerschner, Shell Creek rancher, has protested to the state game and fish commission against closing the elk hunting season in the Big Horn mountains this fall. The feed shortage, Kerschner declared, will cause many of the elk to starve if they are not killed off. He recommended utilizing elk meat for relief this winter.

The report that fewer trucks are on the roads would have been good news before the sheriff got the family car.

QUERIES, ANSWERS CONCERNING HOLC

Q. Are these bonds coupon bonds? If so, what are the interest paying dates? Are these bonds payable to bearer, or are they registered? Does their ownership or assignment carry any liability?

A. These bonds are coupon bonds. The interest paying dates are July 1st and January 1st. There are coupon bonds and registered interchangeable. Coupon bonds in the denominations of $500, $1000, $5000, and $10,000; Registered bonds in the denominations of $1,000, and $5,000. Ownership or assignment does not carry any liability.

Q. What expense is incurred in making a loan? Who determines this expense? What does it include? When is it payable and by whom?

A. The only expense incurred in making a loan is to be paid by the applicant where a loan can be consummated: Attorney $10.00, Appraiser, $5.00. The actual costs of recording the mortgage where the applicant is unable to pay in advance is made a part of the loan. The expense is determined by The Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Q. How soon after the application is filed can a loan be closed and the bonds delivered?

A. Due to the large volume of applications that have come into the office since our opening, it has taken a period of 40 days. It is hoped that a loan can be fully consummated within a period of 20 to 30 days.

Q. Can Mortgages force themselves into the distress class by withholding payments on their loans after June 15, 1933?

A. A mortgagee who wilfully forces himself into distress is not eligible for a loan in the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Q. Can the Corporation accept its own bonds at face value as a credit on its own loans?

A. Quoting from the Act itself: "Any person indebted to the Corporation may make payment to it in part or in full by delivery to it of its bonds which shall be accepted for such purpose at face value."

Q. Are applications for loans being received and approved made by the Corporation before consent is obtained from the mortgagee to accept bonds?

A. No, the consent to accept bonds must be filed.

Q. How do you handle an application where there are junior lien holders who do not consent to accept bonds? In such a case, will the Corporation accept assignment of the first mortgage?

A. We require junior lien holders to sign a consent to accept bonds. In the event they do not and 40 per cent of our appraisement will not liquidate all liens then it is impossible for us to consummate the loan. We are not accepting assignments of first mortgages due to the fact that our mortgage has several clauses that are not contained in other blank forms.

Unknown Heroes

THE heroic role being played by three unidentified scientists in an effort to find the cause of "sleeping sickness" now epidemic in St. Louis is not an unusual one for members of the medical profession. The latter's record has in it many similar cases in which members have risked their lives in an effort to advance the welfare of humanity. In some, the supreme sacrifice has been made.

For several months the nation's best medical brains have been trying to end the St. Louis epidemic, which has taken more than 100 lives. Recognizing the necessity of learning the cause of the disease before a cure could be expected to be found, experiments have been made. Monkeys and rabbits at first were used in these experiments. Mosquitoes, after being permitted to bite victims of the disease, were placed in contact with these animals. The tests were unsuccessful.

Three scientists, their names withheld, then volunteered themselves as subjects, apparently on the theory that monkeys and rabbits might possess a resistance to the disease not common with man. Their offer was accepted and they took the place of the monkeys and rabbits. From 10 to 14 days will be required to determine the success or failure of the experiment.

With their identity concealed they can not be accused of courting publicity, which has become an all too common practice in many walks of professional and private life. They are risking their lives in the hope that whatever sacrifice they may have to make will be of help to humanity. They are unknown heroes in a great cause.

The public may never know their names, but it, nevertheless, will recognize and honor them for their unselfish devotion to a lofty purpose. It is to such men as these that the medical profession owes much of its high standing.

Truck Problem Studied

TEN thousand truck operators throughout the country have been asked by Joseph B. Eastman, federal coordinator of transportation, to answer a questionnaire to determine the relation of trucking to freight transportation.

The inquiry is part of the federal program for bringing into coordination the railroad, waterway and motor transportation. Its immediate purpose is to determine in what sphere transportation of goods by motor vehicle is more economical or serviceable than by other means.

The investigation will not be confined to for-hire vehicles. It will include also private operators of 10 or more vehicles in transporting their own goods, "as it is recognized that such transportation is of growing importance, and facts relating to it must be obtained before any sound transportation plan can be devised."

Assurance was given all to whom the questionnaire was sent that the information and data submitted in reply would be treated in the strictest confidence. The coordinator wants to know the character and extent of traffic handled, the charges made by trucks operating for hire, the nature of the service performed and the expense of truck operation.

The operation of motor trucks have done more than any other one thing to upset America's transportation system. Trucks have given railroads a hard blow by diverting important revenue from the rail lines. They have established themselves permanently in the transportation field. They perform an important public service. This question is not their elimination but to find the proper place for them in the national scheme of transportation.

The present inquiry aims to do this. Its success will mean the solution of a troublesome problem.

CHAPTER XLIV

So Curtis came. Blanche put both arms around him, and kissed him soundly. "I am glad to see you—what's the matter with your old arm that they don't send you up here any more? You're a stranger."

That was the nicest thing about Blanche—her warm sincerity. She was a big girl, with cheeks like apples, and a wide, welcoming smile. There was something fresh and wholesome about her.

Curtis was fond of Gloria. She was a spindly little thing with large pale blue eyes, and fuzzy yellow hair that Blanche curled every day on the iron. "Some would have a permanent wave put in, but I think too much of my child's future for that! I don't care how long it takes me to do it, I curl it all by hand."

Yes, Blanche was a good mother—according to her lights. She sent Gloria to Sunday School every Sunday, and she washed her mouth out with soap if she heard her say a bad word. "You never got that from me!" she'd storm. "I'll teach you to use bad words, you naughty, naughty girl!"

"I intend to send her to a good school," she told Curtis every time he came North, but she put it off. It would be lonely without her, and Ferd would feel badly when he came home and she wasn't there.

It had been months since Curtis had seen them. Pleasant to be back again. Pleasant to eat Blanche's delicious spaghetti, and hold pale little Gloria on his knee.

She put her thin little arm around his neck, and showed him the bright little picture cards she had got in Sunday School. "And this is Moses, when he was a little baby. The queen found him in a basket. . . and this one is the Good Shepherd looking for the little lamb that got lost."

A lump rose in Curtis' throat. . . poor little kid. He thought of Joan where he was. He thought of another little girl whom he might some day hold on his knee. Hurriedly he set Gloria down. "I'll have to be getting along, Blanche."

Then he thought of Joan again. . . what she had done to him. . . all his hopes and dreams in the dust. . . killed by her hand. "I'll stay."

"Oh, all right," he said. "I'll stay." He stayed two days. He bought a blue broadcloth coat with a diminutive squirrel collar for Gloria. The blue just matched her eyes. He felt almost happy for a moment when she put her thin little arms tight around his neck and squeezed him.

"Dear Uncle Curt!" Blanche scolded affectionately. "Still it does look sweet on her. Turn around, Lovey, and let Mamma see the back. Ain't you the proudest baby? Curt, if I've told you once, I've told you twenty times, I'm no gold-digger. You don't have to go and spend all your money. I declare I never saw a fellow as crazy about kids as you are. You ought to get married and have about six yourself!"

The hot tears stung his eyes. Blanche understood him. Blanche appreciated him. She knew all he would do for the girl he married, how generous he would be, how kind. All he would have done for Joan. . . if she hadn't spoiled it. . . wrecked his life. . .

Sometimes he almost hated her. All those months, knowing that he loved her, knowing that he expected to marry her, and not telling, not telling until now. . . the eleventh hour. . .

Once he decided not to go home at all. He would write Joan telling her the situation had become impossible. . . Get a leave of absence from the firm. Travel for a year or so. Begin again. Find another girl eventually.

But it wasn't any use, he couldn't forget her. She would haunt him always. He hadn't found forgetfulness with Blanche. He wouldn't be always be Joan, drawing him back, beckoning to him across the distance. When he closed his eyes he could see her, her delicate white face, her appealing, gray-green eyes. . .

He couldn't be happy with her now, she had made that impossible, but neither could he be happy without her. Might as well go back, and see her again, talk to her. . .

So he came back. He came to Maizie's flat in the evening, after the dishes were done. Maizie was sitting on the lunch-table, determined not to "let on" that she knew anything was wrong. Joan was sitting in a corner reading a book. Reading the same thing over and over, not conscious of a word on the printed page.

When Maizie saw him at the door she snatched her old coat off the hook on the back porch, and hurried down the back stairs to Miss Harvey's. They didn't even know she had gone.

"Curtis!" Joan whispered. "You've—come back?"

"Yes," he said, huskily. "I've come back. I couldn't stay away. I love you, Joan—I love you."

He held her close, so close that he could feel her heart beating against his. She was so pathetically glad to see him. She put out her slim, cool hands, and touched his cheek. "I missed you terribly," she said. "I'm so glad you've come back." And then, "Have you—decided?" She asked, very low.

No pleading in her voice, no humility—just the question—"Have you decided?"

He had expected something different. He didn't know what. Tears perhaps, supplication. . . certainly not that cool question, when he had hardly got into the room, hardly kissed her. . .

He felt his heart hardening, ever so slightly, against her. Didn't she realize all he had suffered? All the suffering she had brought upon him?

"Why couldn't you let me have one moment of happiness," he burst out suddenly, "without reminding me—reminding me—"

She hung her head. "I'm sorry, Curtis. It's all I've thought of. It's very hard—waiting—"

She reached out her arms to him again, but the first moment of ecstasy was gone, gone as if it had never been. She only knew that her head was aching, and in some inexplicable way she had failed him again.

"Did you have a nice trip?" she asked at last—politely, as she would to a stranger.

"Oh—fair." "Your mother has been worried," she went on hurriedly. "She'll be glad you're back."

"Joan—for heaven's sake, don't make conversation. You'll drive me crazy. I'm nearly crazy now. I've thought and thought until I don't know where I am, or what to tell you. You don't know what you've done to me—how this thing affects me."

He half choked and went on. "You see how it is—I'm hardly responsible. . . Johnnie, you'll have to tell me the whole story—tell me the whole thing—who this—this fellow is."

"No, no—I couldn't—you mustn't ask that—I couldn't—"

He began to walk up and down again, as he had on that other night, in the apartment that was to have been their home. Up and down, and down, and restlessly, ceaselessly.

And she sat with her hands folded in her lap, waiting. Like a prisoner in the back neck, her quivering shoulders softened him. There came a sudden rush of tenderness, a desire to protect her, to stand between her and the world. His arms tightened about her, and she clung to him, and cried.

"We'll just let it go on then," he said soothingly. "See how it works out. Try to forget it."

"To forget it?" she echoed. "To forget we have to decide? We can't—we've got to know—"

"We have two months yet. Plenty of time. We'll see. . . I want to know—"

"You mean," she said finally, "that you aren't going to tell me now? That you won't tell me whether you still love me and want to marry me or not? You want me to go on this way—not knowing—surely you don't mean that—"

"I mean that I'm not prepared to make any definite decision this evening, Joan. It won't be any worse to break in a month from now, if break we must, than to do it now—"

She bit her lip. "I—I can't go on that way, Curtis. I want to do what you want—but I can't do that."

He drew back angrily. "It seems to me, Joan, that if one of us must give in to the other, surely, in view of all that has happened—"

Joan drew back, too. Slipped out of his arms, quiet and very cold. "I think you will have to decide now, Curtis. I—I want to go on that way."

She looked so slim and white and frail, as if a stiff breeze would blow her away, but he sensed her strength of purpose, knew she would have her way. She was stronger than he. . . he knew it. . . so he said the only thing he could say. "I'll do it with twisting lips, and eyes that could not quite meet hers."

"I can not give you up, Joan." All the blood drained from her face, until even her lips were white. "You mean—that you still want me, Curtis? That you can—go on with it?"

"Yes—that's what I mean." She cried then, silently, in his arms.

When at last he left her she called him back. "Curtis!"

"Yes, Joan?"

"Curtis—I want you to know—that I'll try to make it up to you—"

"Dear, I know, I know—"

But Maizie was coming. . . he blew her a kiss, and disappeared down the dimly lighted stairway.

The Genesis of An Old Favorite

By IRVIN S. COBB

THERE are several variations of this yarn but a Scotch friend of mine insists that the one which follows is the correct one and, by that same token, the proper ancestor of all the crop of differing versions. As he sets forth the original narrative it runs something like this:

An Aberdonian on his first visit to London got off the train at Euston station. While proceeding afoot along Euston Road on his way to his hotel he suffered a terrific misfortune. He dropped a sixpence and it rolled out of sight. The desolated victim put down his luggage and began a vigorous search for the missing coin. Presently a friendly policeman came along and having learned from the grief-stricken Scot what the trouble was proceeded to aid him in the hunt, but with no results, excepting the loss of fifteen minutes. Finally the Bobby said:

"You go along on your way and I'll keep my eye open for your money. If it turns up I'll have it for you, if you'll come back this way this afternoon."

During the day the gas company had had a squad of men excavating in the street for new mains so that when the Aberdonian reappeared he found the paving torn up and a wide, deep trench extending from the house-line to the middle of the road. He gazed at the scene for a moment and then remarked to himself:

"Weel, I must admit one thing—they are verra thorough here."

AT THE GRAND

Quietly, while Clark Gable is running his meteoric course, a major studio is grooming another young actor for stellar roles. His name is Lyle Talbot, who carries the "heavy" honors in the Warner Bros. picture, "Girl Missing," now showing at the Grand Theatre.

Sometimes the thing isn't done so consciously. You'll remember, for example, that John Gilbert was an extra and bit player when Richard Dix and Conrad Nagel and Ramon Novarro were holding the chief masculine limelight.

When young man name Gable played an extra in a picture in which Gilbert starred—"The Merry Widow."

AT THE CLIFTONA

Against the background of excitement, humor and tragedy that go to make up the day's routine in the receiving ward of a police emergency hospital is set the story of "The Girl in 419," romantic drama featuring James Dunn and Gloria Stuart, which comes to the Cliftona Theatre.

This E. F. Schulberg production for Paramount tells the story of the affair between a young doctor who heads the emergency hospital and a beautiful girl, identity unknown who is brought in as a patient, and whose life he saves.

The picture is charged with action from start to finish. A gangster is found murdered in a hotel room. The girl is found unconscious and dying, badly beaten on the street. Dunn, intrigued by her beauty, works over her for days, finally pulls her through. But when she recovers consciousness, she refuses to tell who she is, why she was beaten. When papers announce that she is recovering, an armed gangster enters the hospital attempts to kill her. He is frustrated in his attempt and killed, but he first shoots David Manners, another young doctor, in the arm, destroying the latter's ability to fulfill his lifelong ambition to become a surgeon.

In the cast supporting Dunn and Miss Stuart, are David Manners, Jack LaRue, Shirley Grey, Johnny Hines and William Harrigan.

Periodic Examinations Are Health Preservers

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D., United States senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

A RECENT EDITORIAL in the Journal of the American Medical Association states that the protection of health through the periodic physical examination is like international disarmament. It has been compared in principle, but with little practical result. This is unfortunate, for no one will deny the many benefits to be derived from periodic physical examinations.

The periodic health examination was first suggested in 1861 by Horace D. Bell. Since then it has been advised as a measure of protection against disease by physicians and surgeons, state and county medical societies, public health officials and various health institutes.

I believe that the public has failed to appreciate the value of such examinations. Perhaps this is because too little stress has been placed upon their benefits.

Prompt Care of Defects

I agree with the article from which I have quoted. I endorse, too, the thought that "too much emphasis has been placed on life extension and not enough on life enrichment."

If everyone, especially the young, would realize that health and happiness can be preserved only by care and prompt attention to body defects, many chronic ailments would be prevented. It is probable that many of the chronic disorders of middle age would not arise if the youth of today appreciated the importance of regular physical examinations. Then they would become familiar with the necessary measures for guarding the health of the body.

Helps to Prolong Life

It is true that life may be prolonged by periodic visits to the doctor. But of greater importance is the fact that good health and happiness can be practically assured if the necessary steps are taken at an early age. Every youth should be taught that good health and physical strength are necessary for a happy and useful life. He must be made to believe that it is his daily obligation to keep physically fit and mentally awake.

We are indeed indebted to every agency that urges the value of periodic physical examinations in early life and that strives to impress upon the public the importance of the plan. It is hoped that by close cooperation between the medical professions and the public, progress toward better health will result.

I urge all my readers who have not recently consulted a physician to do so now. Also, have the children taken to the doctor for a complete physical examination and follow any instructions and advice that he may give you.

In addition, I would advise that regular visits be made to the dentist. Bear in mind that good and strong teeth are essential to health. The temporary teeth as well as the permanent teeth should receive proper attention.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. A. S. Q.—I am a young woman of 23, married and the mother of two children. Lately I have been troubled with dizzy spells, nervousness and flushing of the face. I am all right when sitting down, but as soon as I get up or start to walk I feel my head starting to spin. What would you advise? I am not subject to constipation but was told that I had a gall bladder condition about two years ago.

A.—Have your blood pressure tested. Make sure the digestive system is clear. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Kindly. Q.—What do you advise for sour stomach?

A.—This is usually due to acid in the system caused by a faulty diet and poor elimination.

B. K. Q.—What causes ringing in the ears?

A.—This is often due to nasal catarrh which has extended to the middle ear. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for further particulars and repeat your question.

Promises mean nothing—it's performance that counts. The "bargain" battery that looks good in the store is no bargain in your car if you can't depend on it. Millions of motorists entrust their comfort and safety to EXIDES—they know the EXIDE slogan is no mere phrase. WHEN IT'S AN EXIDE, YOU START. EXIDES are ruggedly built for long wear, and charged "to the hilt" with power ready at the touch of the starter. Garden Clubs Are Feted; Mrs. Haynes is Re-elected

By ANN BENNETT

Garden clubs of the seventh district of the Ohio association, in session here Wednesday, re-elected Mrs. Samuel K. Haynes, of the Franklin-co Garden club, Columbus, as regional director for another two years. The contest between Mrs. Haynes and Mrs. M. E. Stickney of the Licking-co Garden club, Newark, was close.

Mrs. Orion King, president of the local Garden club who was very instrumental in obtaining the regional meeting for this city, was placed in nomination for regional director but declined the honor.

The meeting was a highly successful one although inclement weather prevented the 75 or more persons who attended from visiting the Logan Elm where the afternoon program was to have been held. The entire function, with the exception of the luncheon served in the basement of the Methodist Episcopal church by ladies of the church, was held in the Monday club room of Memorial Hall.

The Monday club room was profusely decorated with fern, marigolds and celosia.

OPENED BY MRS. KING

Mrs. King opened the meeting and after a few words of welcome introduced Mrs. Haynes who spoke briefly, lauding the local club for its activity as an "infant." She explained the election of a regional director and after nominations were received the vote which resulted in her re-election was taken.

At this time in the program representatives of each club attending spoke on the activities of their various groups. Suggestions for organizing clubs were made by Mrs. Haynes who then presented Miss Zorayda Sheets, of Shelby, regional director of the Sixth district.

Miss Sheets' discussion concerned planning activities and formation of a regional speaker's bureau to provide for the exchange of speakers among the various clubs within a district using talent among garden clubs represented. This method would greatly reduce expenses, Miss Sheets explained, and would give various clubs ideas of what other organizations are doing.

When Miss Sheets had concluded Mrs. W. D. Folsom, of the Franklin-co club, Columbus, announced that the tenth anniversary of the Franklin-co club will be held this fall at the Neil House, Columbus, during the Floral show.

After the splendid luncheon at the church the party returned to Memorial Hall where Mrs. Haynes introduced Dr. Howard Jones who spoke on "Historical Significance of the Logan Elm."

DR. JONES SPEAKS

Dr. Jones, in his inimitable manner, told of the early history of the famous tree which he said was a youth when Christopher Columbus landed at San Salvador. "The tree as near as anyone can tell is between 350 and 450 years old," the speaker said. "Its earliest history," he continued, "is traced to 1750."

He then went into the Indian history of the country explaining, in an interesting manner, the religious expression of the people. "The Scioto valley Indians," Dr. Jones stated, "were an intelligent race. The Shawnee warriors lived here and developed their high ideals of perfect government and women's rights."

He told of the wars of 1874 when British, French and Indians were engaged in conflict and of Lord Dunmore's arrangement for peace. Lewis and Dummore met near Logan Elm and all the Indian chiefs were called to Camp Charlotte to sign a treaty. "Logan's speech," Dr. Jones said, "was sent to the meeting at Camp Charlotte. It is believed to have been written near or under the Elm which was ordered for Chief Logan. Lord Dunmore's army camped near there and George Rogers Clark, the famous pioneer, received his first training in that vicinity."

"The Logan Elm," Dr. Jones concluded, "is a beautiful example of a beautiful tree but it is coming to an end as things must do."

He was given an excellent round of applause when he finished his address.

Mr. Tucker, secretary of the Ohio association of Garden Clubs and editor of "The Garden Path" was introduced and used a few minutes' time to congratulate the district clubs for their progress. He said that Prof. Hodus, a garden authority, is planning to attend the Columbus flower show and that reservations could be made with Mrs. David Thomas, 291 E. 14th-ave, Columbus.

TELLS OF WORK
W. Stanley Speed, of Columbus, tree specialist who recently completed the task of rebuilding the Logan Elm for the Ohio Archeological and Historical association after contributions to Columbus and Chillicothe newspapers and The Herald, told of the work necessary to make the venerable tree strong enough to resist winds and storms. He said the Elm is the only tree in the country to be fixed in such a way. His talk was technical, various phases of the reconstruction being explained.

"The Elm is now in good condition," Mr. Speed declared, "and it should live for another 10 years." He said that seedling from the tree should have large locations in which to grow.

Mrs. Howard Jones was heard at the conclusion of Mr. Speed's talk. She told how the Elm looked 21 years ago and related the damage storms have done to the landmark. The state bought the tree 20 years ago. Mrs. Jones announced annual Ohio History Day next Sunday at the Logan Elm and invited all the Garden club delegates to attend the services then to attend the informal reception at the Jones home.

Mrs. Haynes in closing the meeting said there are two things to keep in mind: 1. Find members in clubs to contribute to the programs in other club meetings; 2. Keep in mind to spread the gospel of gardening.

The Methodist church dining room for the luncheon, was beautifully decorated. Mrs. Mack Noggle and E. L. Brechner comprised the decorating committee but credit for the work was given by both to Edwin Haacker who was introduced by Mrs. King. The registration committee was comprised of Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer, Mrs. Howard Jones and Miss Mary Heffner.

GUESTS LISTED
Out of town persons who attended included the following: Ruth E. Kay and Helen Todhunter of Washington C. H., Mrs. Carlisle Gibson of Worthington, Mrs. Howard White of Hilliards, Mrs. T. W. Ruff, H. F. Hamlin, Mrs. Havnes, Grace G. Jams, Mrs. J. F. Pixley, Mrs. Ella Paul, Walter Tucker, Mrs. R. R. Kvie, Mrs. W. D. In his first message, as President of the United States, Thomas Jefferson earnestly supplicated for unity in the face of disunion, friendship to all nations and entangling alliance with none; for an active and efficient militia, for the freedom of speech, of the press and of religion; and for economy in public expenses. "These principles," he said, "should be the creed of our political faith, the text of civil instruction, the touchstone by which to try the services of those we trust."
